We shard of one instance yesterdsy, that we shall prehaps violate an implied confidence by narrating. A family were at the tea table, the grown up son at d his wife finding a home with his parents. The young wife's face was sad, for her husband had declared his intention to join the recruits. The father was grave but said nothing. The young wife turned to the mother and begged her to "persuade W——, not to emist." The heart of the mother swelled, and the tears stood in her ages, but the words ahe spoke were unfalter.

The Institute was called to order by the President. At the calling of the roll cash teacher responded by reciting a verse of Scripture. After which, Rev. Dr. Haven offered prayer. Minutes of yesterday's session were read, and after amending, adopted. The report of the critic was read by Mr. J. E. Kimball. The President appointed Mr. Rudd and Minu Mearston estitic for the dee. The following the contraction estitic for the dee.

At every station on the route, though the train only stopped for wood and water, the entire communities seemed to be ponted out and einstered in crowds about the depots and sent a cheer after them even where the train did not stop, that not even the din of the noisy wheels could drown. The glorious "stars and stripes" floated from little station houses, from farm houses along the line, and farmers rode miles over muddy spring roads to catch a sight of this train.

At Janesville the entire city was out, and gave a most spirited and stirring ovation. The whole community was out en mas a. A national salute of artillery was fired, overy available point of outlook had its burden of spectators, among whom prevailed great enthusisam. Bands were playing, handkerchiefe, waved, and countless flags floated in the air. It was a splendid token that the American heart is in the right place and now beats full, saddened yet unapalled, at the necessity of an ed yet unap appeal to arms.

At Clinton Junetion there was a large turn out, as also at Florence, Sharon, Howard. Woodstock, Mc Henry Co. turned out an immense crowd, and at every little town on the line through Northern Illinois the people were out in force.

The train reached Chicago about 7 P. M., and was received by not less than ten thou-sand people, who througed the depot grounds of the Northwestern on West Kinzie street, and lined West Water street, along which the cars passed slowly down to the West Side Union Depot, at Madison street, where the transfer to the cars of the P., Pt. At the Plymouth Congregational Church Rev. Mr. Corning delivered a very effective discourse characteristically alive with living references to actual events. In many other churches appropriate references were made, among these, at morning service in Trinity, where Biahop Lee of Iowa officiated.

At St. Paul's Universalist Church, Sunday sevang, the pastor, Rev. W. H. Ryder, made a brief and stirring allusion to present evenis, saying that the could not wait until next Sabbat to define his position. He separated with dependence, this deependence, this deependence, this deependence, this deependence, this deependence, this deependence, this deep solicitude, and have found it difficult to recognize the hand of Providence in the affairs of men.

I was born, said the speaker, within half a malle of the spot where, in the cabin of the Maydower, was signed the contract which was the first step towards the establishment of the Government of which we have been so justify proud. There, in my childhood's home, I learned from my parents an earnest love for my country and the experiences of my whole life and my visits to other countries have but strengthened that love; so that, as I stand here to-night, I give to my country and my country and my country sing my whole heart and entire devotion.

The part being played by the women of Chicago at this time is notable and characteristic of the sex that has given to the world Sparian mothers and the marrons of the Revolution. There is now a demand for the sons and hustands and brothers to face peril, and lay down their lives for their country, and woman sere loyal is not shrinking from the sacrides.

We heard of one instance yesterday, that we shall perfinape violate an implied condicience by narrating. A family were at the tea table, the grown up son se d his wife fielding a home with his parents. The young wife's face was sad, for her husband had declared his intention to Join the recruits. The father was grave hat said nothing. The young wife turned to the mother and begged her to "persuade W—, not to entite." The heart of the mother swelled, and the tears stood in her eyes, but the words she spoke were unfaiter.

The steam transport liabile, lying at Canal street, had been ordered to be in readiness for sea at 3 o'clock precisely, and it was stated she would sail at that hour, but a delay in the arrival of cartain stores kept her back until about three hours beyond that time. The fires were started under the boilers at 10 A.M., and at 9 o'clock she was blowing steam heavily. THE DEPARTURE OF TROOPS FROM GOVERNOE'S HLAND.

Yesterday morning, active doings progressed on Governor's Island. As early as 8 o'clock, orders from the headquarters of the army were received, directing the equipment of three companies of recraits. Then the busile commenced. The detail was hung up in the different rooms; men crowded round it, climbed on each other's shoulders, on benches, boxes, and piles of clothing, to see whether their names were on the list. Those who were mentioned on it no sooner learned the fact than they began their final preparations. As nearly everyshody's knapsack had been packed for weeks, and every body's carbouche-box filled with the war allowance, and everybody's everything in ready for the road, "conveniences" were only mecssary. The ambulance was next pat in order for departure; the bag gag-emuster took charge of the wagon loads of articles coinfied to them, and placed the indipensable sentinel over it, with the customary order that their lites bodies must fewer cease to protect it, implying, naturally enough, that their dead bodies could do very little to attain that end. At 3 o'clock there were no unbelted men to be seen. Maskets standing by the wall, soldiers swaggering up and down the parade walk, pulling out their gives, wiping out "the mipple," tightening the chin-strap, conversed freely on the weather, the price of vegetables, the scarcity of grass in Texas, and the quality of the soup. But no one seemed to take of or care about his destination. At it o'clock the following troops left the Island's exceptions.

racks, in the navy yard?

Sanibo of The length of time which it cocupied to flash loading the Illinois, it was deemed best to receive the troops from Fort-Hamilton before the steamer started, and thus svade the delay of stopping at that place. The steamer Cataline was consequently dispatched to carry them.

As soon as the last of the small boats were hoisted to the deck of the Illinois, late last evening, all the superfluous tackling and ropes which had been used in the process of loading were thrown ashore, and the order given to cast off the lines. This was quickly performed by the long-shoremen upon the wharf, at twenty five minutes of 10 o'clock, the starboard engine was allowed to set upon its side wheel for a few moments, and the prove ofthe Illinois slowly swang round towards the river. Then, as the wheels commenced their revolutions which were to arge her conward in her long and gunknown voyage, the workmen on the dock gathered in a little group and silently watched her movements. "God speed her." finally broke from the lips of a sturdy stevedors, as she left the land a slig's length behind. Heavily loaded as she was, her progress was necessarily slow, and her peddies dipped almost to the axle, making her motion still more difficult. As she slowly receded in the murky moonlight, she looked like some great jeastom ship upon an enchanted ocean, as amooth and almost perfectly waveless were the waters of the Hudson.

Loug after the hulk disappeared in the darkness, the pissh of her wheels resounded through the still night, and told that she was progressing forward. But few witnessed her departure, and if was done so quickly and quietly that no attention was attracted, except that of those who happened to be in the vicinity. The steam trug Thomas Freeborn, chartered for the purpose, accompanied the Large quantities of shot, shell, grape, and shrappell were speedily transferred from the Naval Storehouse to the deck, and themee to the hold of the frigate. A battery of the cargo, together with a large number of cartages and small guns, intended for boate, Everything was in the greatest confusion on hoard; clother-bage were crowded in the mess chests; marines' belis blockaded the passage to the ward room, maskets, cannon spikes, and gangear generally, were strevn about the other extremely difficult. The preclucts of the Yard and wharves were crowded with visitors from New York and Brooklyn—officers' friends, sallors' and soldier a wives and families—and not a few frish town pirates endeavisars were encased in oil cloths, and carefully stowed away; the powder hatches were caulked down, and the sentries posted on them; shot and shell, solid and hollow, were placed in rails behind the "breechings" of the guns, and the strong recoil planks firmly fast-ended in the deck.

The trunks were marked, "Checked to Washington."

In an arrival of freight which soon followed were several loads of cement for constructing out-posts and serthworks, 1,000 spades, how lizer shells of various sizes, gun-carridges, cartinizes, carkinders, cark

About 12 o'clock, Company A. Second Regiment, United States Flying Artillery, Captain Barry, arrived at the foot of Canal stret, where they remained two or three hours before going on board. They numbered flyjseven men, as our reporter was informed by one of the Company. With their biggues and ammunition wagons they formed a line on the street of a somewhat formidable appearance. Company B, from Governor's Island in Fort Hamilton, arrived early in the afternoon. There are about sixty of them, and they are picked men. The same Company was on board the Star of the West on her late exp dities.
